FLOOR DEBATE

April 16, 2002 LB 1185

SENATOR BEUTLER: Okay, well, let me see if I'm understanding your question. Are you indicating that you would prefer to have the word "used" there instead of "designed"?

SENATOR BROMM: Well, "designed" is a word that I don't know what it means. If it means that they do something with it after it leaves the land, I tend to certainly agree with your amendment. But if...if while growing on the land you say it's designed for use by an urban person later, then I see a lot of gray area coming into the interpretation of that definition. I think if what you mean is people that have horticulture farms, if you will, and they market it to urban people who buy trees and buy plants, I agree with you. But this definition is supposed to apply to while there is raw products growing out there on the land. They are farmers and they are not...that's agriculture, and does this change that in some way? And I...and that's why I asked you about the sod farmer, because we need to know. They need to know.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Well, Senator, I think we're getting into one of the things that the definitions, your new definitions, don't escape and that is some interpretation by somebody or another, and probably by the courts in the end. You know, maybe I should ask you about some of these categories.

And one of the categories is nursery employees and drivers; includes incidental landscape gardening. Now these are the best definitions that people could come up with after working for years and years and years in this area, Senator. It says, and in this category it says, applies to the propagation of trees, shrubs, plants or flowering shrubs or plants, retail or wholesale sales from nursery location. Now, is your definition of agricultural pursuits...
